Secretary Salazar, California Officials to Hold

Public Meeting on California's Water Challenges

Secretary of the Interior Ken Salazar will host a public meeting with in Washington, D.C. federal and California officials to discuss strategies for addressing a range of water supply challenges facing the state. Joining the Secretary will be Deputy Secretary of the Interior David J. Hayes, Interior's Director of the Pacific Region David Nawi and Director of California Department of Water Resources Lester Snow.

Among the challenges to be discussed are federal and state plans to address California drought impacts in 2010; the Bay Delta Conservation Plan; seismic risks and impacts; and climate change impacts, adaptation possibilities, and federal and state actions. This is the second public meeting on California water challenges jointly held by Interior and California officials. The first was in Sacramento, California, on August 12.

The meetings are part of ongoing federal and state efforts to develop collaborative strategies to address major water resource challenges in California – challenges exacerbated by three years of drought and environmental restrictions that have reduced deliveries to some water users.

Credentialed news media representatives are invited to attend the public meeting and participate in a news media availability with Secretary Salazar, Deputy Secretary Hayes and Director Snow following the session.

Hi everyone,

Thanks for your attendance and participation at last Friday's Bay-Delta meeting here at CEQ. We hope you've had a chance to gather feedback from your regional offices that will help us to identify appropriate and specific interagency next steps.

To that end, Mike and Letty have compared schedules and want to propose re-convening the group next Tuesday, September 15 from 1-2 pm in 730 Jackson Place. (This seems to be the earliest convenient time given scheduling constraints and a shortened week.)

On a related note, attached is the interagency Everglades MOU that Rock discussed at last week's meeting as a potential precedent for our efforts, which he asked us to forward along to the full group.

Please let us know if you have any questions – and looking forward to the discussion next week.

Best,
Matt
